

This month's spotlight is on

Mary Maisey-Ireland

Empowering people is her lifelong passion, and Mary Maisey-Ireland's career in educational publishing, student success, business consulting, and now life coaching has provided diverse arenas in which to exercise that passion.

"Being the eldest of five kids, an Air Force brat, spending eleven years as Dave Ellis's right hand (before he launched a life coaching school), being a mom, a personal growth enthusiast, and owning my own businesses make up my experience," she said. "I also have a Master's degree in business, and an undergraduate in Journalism."

Her family plays an important part in Mary's life.

"My husband, David, is one of those enviable people who are completely comfortable in their own skins. He is passionate about life, about our kids, about his work (he's a middle school Science teacher), and about me. He sees the best in me, even when I can't. He is my best friend," she said. "My children, Brennan and Keeley, are my most skillful and loving teachers. They teach me about beauty, feelings, forgiveness, flexibility, and staying in the present moment. Participating in their journeys is the sweetest and most excruciating experience of my life so far."

When not spending time with them, Mary has a wide range of hobbies.

"I love to grow flowers and vegetables, to cook when I'm not pressured, to cross-country ski, to travel everywhere and anywhere, to read, to write, to be a home-maker, to do yoga, to create any kind of ceremony, and to work with women entrepreneurs — there's nothing like it for an endorphin rush!" she said. "I am blessed with a close-knit family, dear friends, and a powerful relationship with Spirit, all of which are sources of great joy and support."

Women's Network members can find Mary online at www.YourJoyfulLife.com.

"Growing your own business is an act of courage, faith, and love," she said. "Having a partner who is committed to your success makes a big difference! Try it out with a free initial coaching session."
